

Dr. Peggy Elliott Author & Executive Coach

Dr. Peggy Elliott is an author, executive coach, minister and much sought after business consultant and conference speaker. For thirty years, she was blessed to own her own international consulting firm, specializing in racial and cultural diversity training to Fortune 500 corporations, training over 10,000 executives and employees.

Elliott led the start-up of this leading edge professional HR services firm; one of the first to provide trend-setting diversity management training and OD with human capital development and organizational strategy. She was responsible for the development and marketing of the firm, and grew the business over 25 years into a premiere international organization earning a reputation for quality service and solid business acumen in the Fortune 500 business community in the areas of training and development and organizational development. Clients included manufacturing, politics and government, non-profit, health care, financial services, and social and civic organizations, to name a few.

A native of St. Paul, MN, Elliott has been a resident of Wichita, KS for the past four years. Elliott has served on numerous community boards. In the 1990's Elliott served as an advisor and speech writer to the former President Bill Clinton in the area of race relations. She was a radio interviewer along with Alex Haley, the infamous director of the award winning movie Roots, and she served on the Billy Graham Executive Committee. Dr. Elliott has been a missionary in South Africa, Argentina and Haiti.

As an author, her newest book is titled, "Finding Our True Freedom: How to Bring Healing to the Broken Hearts of African Americans." Her book titled, "Listen Up, Sisters, How to Capture the Heart of a Man and Keep It," will be out in 2009.

She is blessed to be married to Mr. Kevin Elliott, and has two adult children, Corey and Tameka and two grandchildren, KiJana Monet and Zion Israel.
